

Very Special Occasions, Indeed!

PROVO CIRCUS PARADE — Photo by John B. Fairbanks, early artist and photographer, catches excitement of a circus parade held about 1897. Note elephants and numerous horse-drawn carriages as well as a few wagons and other vehicles. The two towers in background belong to old fire hall (left) and the County Courthouse that preceded the present County Building.

WE'LL HAVE TO RELY on Central Utah old-timers to identify this picture. Our guess is that the steam-engine operated rig has something to do with processing corn or sugar cane — probably the latter in the molasses-making process. The photo was included in a group furnished courtesy of of the Strawberry Water Users Association.

EDITH WHITNEY

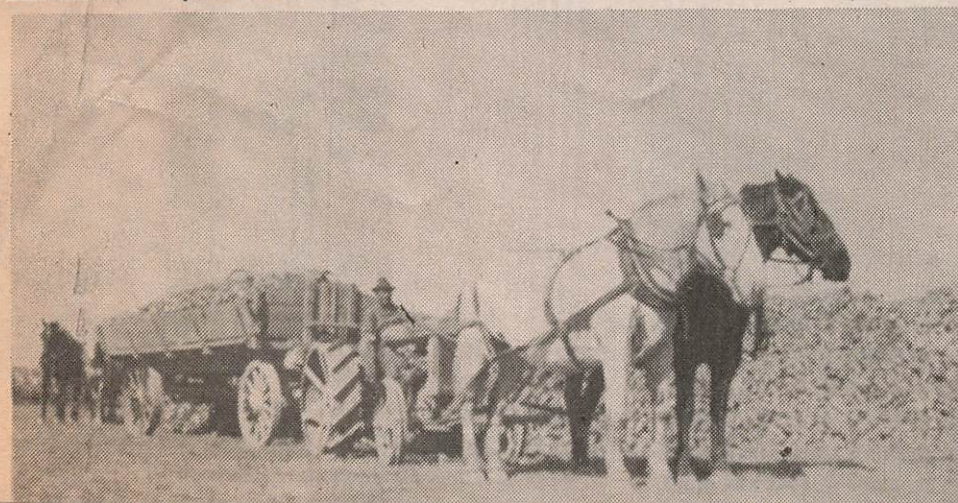

Altrusa Club

Altrusa is an international service organization for professional women founded in 1917 at Nashville, Tenn. It became international in scope in 1935. Membership is around 18,000 in 550 clubs in 13 countries.

The Provo club was organized in April, 1958, and two charter members are still active: Margaret Davis and Eliza Bjerregaard.

Altrusa clubs are grouped geographically into district. Each member, then, by virtue of her membership is a local club, is also affiliated with a district and with the international association.

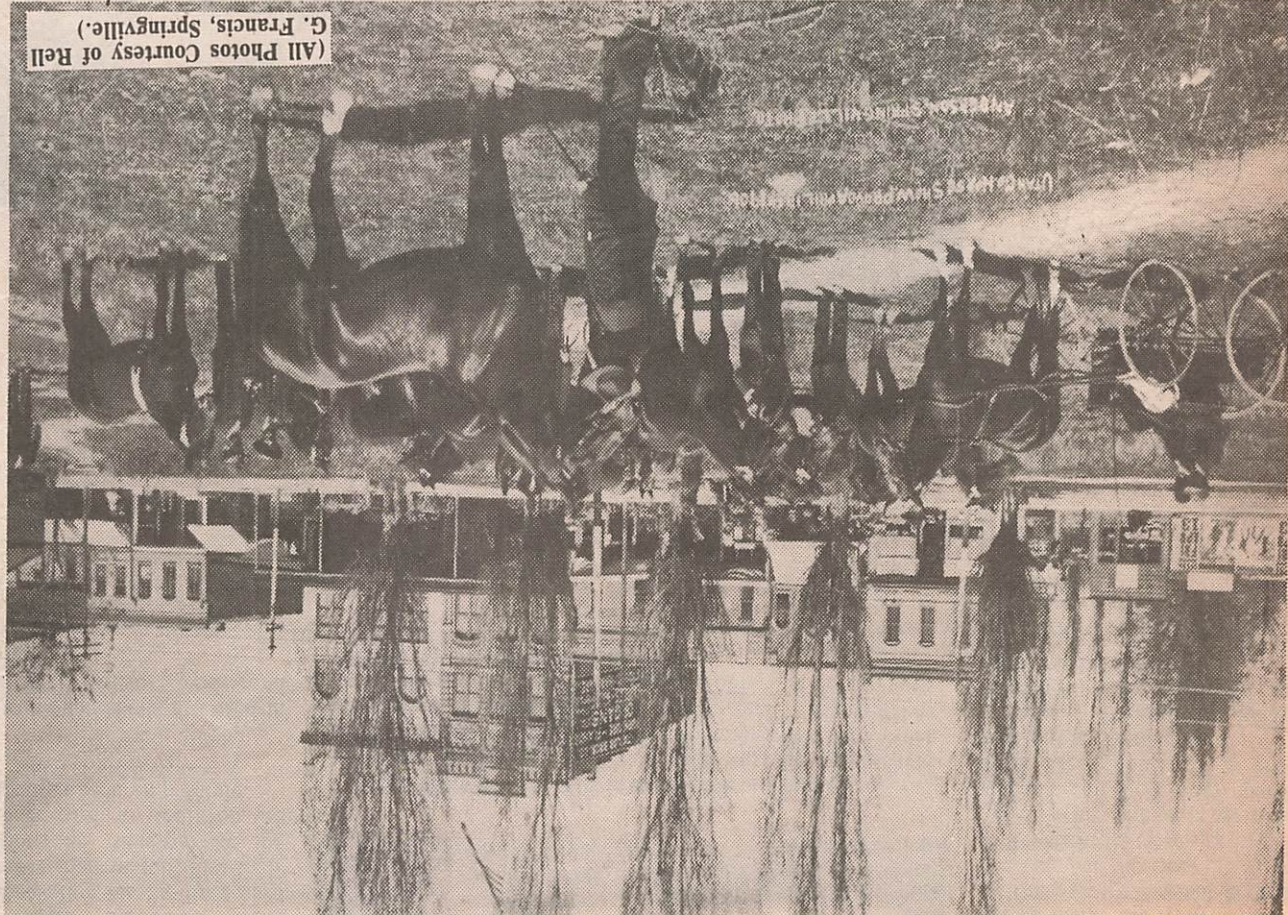

Through annual district conferences and biennial international conventions,

Co. Horse Show, Provo, April 13th, 1906, Anderson, Springville, Photo."

THE SITE of the present Provo City Building was as good a place as any to hold a horse show in 1906. Center Street is visible in the background. The photograph is labeled "Utah compensation for the time used by these men in fulfilling their positions be reviewed by the council and a decision be reached as soon as possible.

(All Photos Courtesy of Rell G. Francis, Springville.)

Cocoa bean shells are used in fertilizer, cattle food and medicine.

OREM ELEMENTARY is in the middle of a number of fund raising activities to help buy books for the new school library. Here Principal Phil Buchanan discusses the project with school librarian Betty Mae Watts, right. It is hoped that enough books and equipment can be obtained in time to open the library by the first of the year.

"Our library has not been in use yet, but the Book Fair and other fund raising projects, it is hoped the shelves will be stocked, and the library opened soon after Jan. 1," a PTA committee member said.

Persons wishing to donate books or funds may call the school at 224-1330.

